BREAK UP GANGS OF SCHOOL LOITERERS

Chief of Police Champion Put a Stop to Nasty Gangs of Boys Around School at Night.

Four youthful rascals, rounded up by Chief of Police P. D. Champion, were given a severe talking over the coals this afternoon in the chief's office, for a continued loitering around the Jefferson school building and for being a general nuisance in the neighborhood.

This is one of several little gangs of boys ranging in age all the way from seven to sixteen, who have been the objects of much complaint by citizens residing in the neighborhood of the various city schools.

The chief has been keeping watch for several evenings, and if it is not for a number of these mischief makers, "There won't be any more warnings," said Chief Champion today.

"We have told the boys to stay away from the school building and if I hear any more trouble from this source, it will go hard with them. Gangs of boys seem to take great delight in loitering around the schools, ringing the bells, making a great deal of disturbance, and if it will not be deterred any longer."

The Epworth League will have a "sund" social this evening at 7:30 on the church lawn. Music by the orchestra.

Two Sentenced: Fred Babcock, an Elkhorn farmer, indicted into municipal court on the charge of drunkenness, was given fifteen dollars or twenty days in jail by Judge Harry Maxwell this morning. Charles Morgan, arrested by himself and generally disturbing the peace, but it will not be deterred any longer.

AFTER LA FOLLETTE.

Action of Senator La Follette in blocking necessary appropriation for the establishment of an aviation army, after the measure had passed the lower house of congress without a dissenting vote, is on a par with his actions throughout the entire present situation. His filibuster during the closing hours of the last congress is really responsible for the delay in training and equipping our soldiers and sailors and now he seeks to further handicap the nation by senseless debate, long drawn out discussions of points which have been most carefully considered and decided upon long before the measure was actually drafted. La Follette is nothing if he is not dramatic. Time was when it was stated that he would have made a wonderful actor, a man who could have portrayed the various characters of the immortal Shakespeare, but in view of his present attitude it is more probable he would have made a better buffoon of the Charles Chaplin type than a soul-inspiring dramatic personage. Is there no way to bottle him up? Would it not be possible to have him suddenly wake to the realization that he is but a monkey wrench thrown into the smoothly running machinery of the government?

PSYCHOLOGY OF WAR.

There have been wars throughout all centuries past. Wars without number, without reason, for conquest, for lust of power, for revenge, for religious liberty for almost every pretext that could be imagined. An eastern exchange in commenting upon the present war says that it will occur to students of history that while we have ample evidence that the world has not outgrown the resort to arms in settlement of international disputes, there is one class of wars and that perhaps the most devastating of all, the revival of which is unthinkable. These are the wars of religion. No one for instance could imagine a league of the Catholic nations of Europe, going to war to compel Protestants to accept the doctrine of the immaculate conception. But it would have been quite conceivable to Louis XIV.

But there has been a substitution in the case of Germany of something which psychologically amounts to nearly the same thing. This is a fanatical nationalism in place of religion. It is fanatical and no professes itself. It is moreover the obsession of a whole nation and not as to many apologists suggest, of a small governing class. It is the fruit of an intensive system of education such as the world has never seen before.

This represents a national state of mind, impossible to approach by processes of reason. Something outside and beyond reason has been substituted with a resulting condition which puts peace far away. Even the fact that more than a million German soldiers have been sent to join "Old Fritz in the Elysian Fields," or whatever his more probable address may be, has not convinced the German people that they are wrong, but only that they have been unjustly treated by fate. It is no uncommon delusion for a lunatic to believe that he is the one sane person looking out upon an insane world.

To the well balanced mind it seems almost unbelievable that Germans can see the moral reprobation of the civilized world directed against them without asking themselves if they are not in the wrong. But their fanatical nationalism has been cultivated to a pitch of fever which resembles the spirit of the mob in the massacre at St. Bartholomew.

It is everlastingly true that righteousness exalteth a nation; and there is no substitute. When for the dictates of religion and public morality is substituted a soulless paganism, a nation has already led itself to the brink of destruction, however strong it may be. In its morally defenseless state it has been conducted by the Tempter to a high mountain and shown the kingdoms and spoils of the earth. It would take courage and optimism indeed to believe that half a century of right teaching will restore the German sense of proportion.

The national council of defense are all right when they urge the production of more wool. We will need all the surplus supply possible when the north wind begins to blow and coal prices soar out of sight.

Germany is evidently trying to put new wine into old bottles and the bottles will not stand the pressure.

Medicine Hat has a grievance. Whenever there is a blizzard or a zero wave it is always referred to as responsible but when the weather is fine no one ever gives that town with a funny name credit for anything worth while.

If it is true that four German submarines were sunk by the naval forces escorting the first French expeditionary troop ships perhaps they will not be so anxious to know the date of the next sailing as they might otherwise have been.

No matter what you may say the German crown prince will not be recorded as the George Washington of Germany in the future American and English histories.

It is officially announced that German gold financed the latest revolution in China. After the Mexican case one would think Germany would stop that sort of tactics.

Constantine will be able to impress upon the Kaiser the wonderful views and the delights of the Swiss climate.

CAUSE OF DEATH IS UNKNOWN IS VERDICT IN BASSETT INQUEST

Physicians' Opinion Was That Death Was Due To Shock.—No Suspicious Evidence.

That Elmer Bassett came to his death through cause unknown, was the verdict of the coroner's jury this morning in the inquest over the body of Bassett, which was found on the Northwestern railroad tracks near the Northwestern railroad tracks near the Hansen Furniture company early last Sunday morning. No definite evidence could be brought to light that the man had been killed by a train or that he had been the victim of foul play.

According to the testimony of Drs. McGuire and Munn, who examined the body, the wounds were insubstantial, but the death was due to shock, secured possibly by a fall. In the belief of Chief of Police P. D. Champion, Bassett fell forward, burying his face in the cinders, and being knocked unconscious, smothered before aid arrived.

With the unknown cause verdict brought in by the jury, nothing more can be done and the case is automatically dropped because of lack of incriminating evidence.

Testimony of the doctors, of A. Stapleton, of Officers Rogers and Morrissey, of Edward Johelski and of Charles Munson, was taken. Munson told of having done considerable drinking with Bassett prior to the time of their separating, but a few hours before Bassett's death. When last seen, Bassett had several bottles of beer in his possession, three of which are believed to have been consumed by him. A quantity which with the liquor he had had in company with Munson, was sufficient to intoxicate him. In this condition he is believed to have tripped and fallen, sustaining the wounds, and the shock which resulted in his death.

The members of the coroner's jury were: F. B. Green, Walter Helms, Frank Avers, J. N. Drake, P. Kavanaugh, and Phil Doherty.

SPOTLIGHTS PERMITTED SAYS CHIEF CHAMPION

Automobile spotlights, the small searchlights mounted on the windshields of many cars, may be used down upon the road, directly in front of the car, and do not shoot out into the eyes of pedestrians and other motorists. This was the statement of Chief of Police Champion today regarding the use of lights and the recent regulation compelling the dimming of bright headlights within the city limits.

Since the ruling went out from headquarters, many motorists have not dared to use even their spotlights, but this practice will be tolerated provided the light is directed down upon the road immediately in front of the car, where it guards against hitting bumps but does not constitute a menace for other people.

COMPANY "M" READY TO LEAVE FOR CAMP AT MOMENT'S NOTICE

Captain Caldwell Much Better—Men Drilling Six Hours a Day and Anxiously Await Order to Depart.

With Captain Caldwell's condition much improved and with indications that he will be able to resume his duties at the army within a few days, Company M is being rapidly rounded into shape for their mobilization at Camp Douglas which will probably come early next week.

All drill will be called off for tomorrow afternoon for inspection of the entire company, as to arms, equipment, condition of quarters, and all the things required of soldiers in training. This inspection is in a way preliminary to the muster inspection which is expected at any time as a part of the forty day of being drafted into the service of the United States.

Controversy over the training camp of the state troops is still hanging fire, though it is highly probable that the men will go to Waco, Texas. The exact movement of troops will be kept as quiet as possible by the authorities. They are in the federal service now, and while there could be little danger in heralding the entrainment and movement of large bodies of men in this part of the country, the government will endeavor to keep all phases of the training and mobilization as secret as possible.

No orders have been received by Captain Caldwell, or his subordinates, regarding the exact time for their departure, but they have been commanded to hold themselves in readiness for immediate entrainment.

Six hours of hard drill a day is the main feature of the daily routine now, and both the old men and the rookies are learning what it means to prepare for real war. Lieutenant Felton this morning marched the "vets" out on a hike and covered four miles in less than an hour, with the result that every man returned to the armory drenched with perspiration and ravenous with hunger.

"Look the Kaiser" is beginning to be heard more and more on all sides, and with the excitement of the draft today, unusually large crowds gathered to watch the various groups of soldiers drill.

With the company recruited to full war strength, no new enlistments have been received, but there are nearly a dozen applications to be heard.

TRACTOR PRACTICAL ON COUNTY'S FARMS

Wisconsin Farmer Sees Machine on Farm of John E. Kennedy—Displaces Horses—Lowers Expense.

Another agricultural journal has taken occasion to investigate the activities of John E. Kennedy of this city, prominent in Rock county farming and stock raising. The Wisconsin Farmer of current issue describes in detail advantages reverting to Mr. Kennedy consequent to the employment of tractors on his farms.

From a personal interview with Mr. Kennedy and a visit to his Oak Lawn farm, the journal writer vividly depicts in his article the big financial saving as well as other features through the use of a 10-20 kerosene tractor.

Mr. Kennedy had "knee-high corn by the fourth of July." In an illustration the paper shows the tractor busy disking and pulverizing, with a double horse team following with a harrow, another team following with the roller and a fourth team winding up the operation with the corn planter. The outfit cleaned up fifteen acres per day, which in the parlance of the agriculturalist is "going some."

The tractor does the work of six horses and sometimes eight. It has eliminated the use of three teams formerly employed. The cost is decreased by Mr. Kennedy to be 20 percent less than the up-keep of horses.

Regular meeting of Rock River Encampment No. 1 F. V. will be held at East Side Odd Fellows' Hall this Friday evening. J. W. Van Beynum, Scribe.

ROCKFORD DEFEATED
BY LOCAL GOLFERS

Country Club Players Beat Illinois Men by Score of 53 to 31—Praise Local Course.

Janesville's honor on the golf links was easily upheld yesterday when the local country club players trimmed the Rockford stars in tournament play, by the score of 53 to 31. Though there was no record-breaking golf on the part of either team, the playing was consistent and from the start it was evident that the local amateurs would triumph.

With the course in more perfect condition than it has ever been, the match started promptly at one o'clock. Each pairing played eighteen holes, one point being awarded to the winner of each nine holes and a premium of one additional point for a win on the whole score.

The Rockford players, who come from a large club which maintains a eighteen hole course, were most voluble in their praise of the local club, and declared that both the greens and the fairways are in better shape than any course they have seen. Similar expressions of praise for the local course is heard from every visiting golfer, even those from some of the finest clubs in the west declaring that the greens here are in better shape than their own.

H. W. Wussaw, the local professional, and A. Duncan, the Rockford "pro," split even in their match.

The British Tanks at The Battle of The ANCRE

This remarkable picture showing a tank squadron in action against German positions in France is illustrative of the change machinery has brought to war—none of the martial glory of charging horsemen, waving banners and blaring trumpets or the neigh of fiery steeds in the charge of today. Instead is the lumbering groan of the grotesque machines shown crawling over trenches with the infantry doggedly stooping and rushing behind.

The pictures were taken last fall during the Battle of the Ancre.

Do Not Touch Your Carburetor

It is the most delicate piece of mechanism on your car. It contains the mixture which supplies the propelling energy to your cylinders for combustion and therefore power.

A change in adjustment means changed power and a different acting engine. When you get a good, economical adjustment keep it. Don't let anyone touch it.

If you burn Red Crown Gasoline with the correct carburetor adjustment you never will have to change it except for winter.

If you buy gasoline indiscriminately a constant carburetor change is required to get even fair results because gasolines from sundry refineries vary. In Red Crown alone you have a uniform chain of boiling point fractions which are identical in every batch.

RED CROWN
Everywhere and Everywhere the Same

Every batch is inspected before it leaves the refinery, and is guaranteed by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana to be exactly the same as every other batch, no matter whether you get it today, tomorrow, next week, or in the next state, and you can get it everywhere.

If you are not using Red Crown Gasoline start today. Fill your tank with it—take your car to an expert carburetor man. Get the right adjustment and then let it alone. You will be surprised how your mileage will increase.

TOBACCO MONOPOLY
VALUABLE TO SWEDEN

(Special to THE GAZETTE.)
Stockholm, Sweden, July 20.—Sweden's receipts from the increased tobacco taxes of 1916, which the kingdom's budget commission had estimated at 10,000,000 crowns when the law was passed, amounted to 15,200,000 crowns. Part of this sum was acquired by the elimination of wholesale dealers, the state monopoly now selling direct to retailers. Prices were increased sharply a few months ago, particularly for cigarettes, which now cost on the average 100 per cent more than at the same time last year.

Wonderful Remedy for STOMACH TROUBLE
One dose convinces.Use Coconut Oil
For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain refined coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two spoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get purified coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

A TREATMENT
FOR NERVESWoman Tells How Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCEBATOR, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, headache, dizziness, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from choice roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

The Real
Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kitchell Webster

(Copyright 1916, The Bobbs-Merrill Company.)
That remark struck Rodney out of his long silence. During the whole of Randolph's recital of his encounter with Rose he'd never once lifted his eyes from the gray ash of his cigar. He didn't want to look at Randolph, nor think about him. Just wanted to remember every word he said, so that he could carry the picture away intact.

There was something peculiarly horrifying to him in the exhibition Randolph was making of himself. He'd never in his life taken a drink except convivially, and then he took as little as would pass muster. Going off alone and deliberately fuddling oneself, as a means of escaping unpleasant realities, struck him as an act of the basest cowardice. But for that picture of Rose he'd have gone long ago and left Randolph to his benumbed reflections. Only Rose had asked him to drop in on the doctor for a visit. Did she mean she wanted him to try to help?

He tried, though not very successfully, to conceal his violent disapproval of the task, when he said: "Look here, Jim! What is the matter with you? Are you sober enough to tell me?" Randolph put down his glass. "I have told you," he said. "I'm Eleanor's kept man. Well kept, oh, yes! Beautifully kept. I'm nothing but a possession of hers! A trophy of sorts, an ornament. I'm something she's made. I have a big practice. I'm the most fashionable doctor in Chicago. They come here, the women, in shoals. That's Eleanor's doing. I'm a faker, a fraud. I pose for them. I play up. I give them what they want. And that's her doing. They go silly about me; fancy they're in love with me. That's what she wants them to do. It increases my value for her as a possession.

"I haven't done a lick of honest work in the last year. I can't work. She won't let me work. She—she's a woman. Wherever I turn, there she is, smoothing things out, trying to make it easy, trying to anticipate my wants. I've only one want. That's to be let alone. She can't do that. She's insatiable. There's always something more she's trying to get, and I'm always trying to keep something away from her, and failing."

"And why? Do you want to know why, Aldrich? That's the cream of the thing. Because we're in love with each other. She wants me to live on her love. To have nothing else to live on."

"Do you want to know what my notion of heaven is? It would be to go off alone, with one suit of clothes in a handbag, oh, and fifty or a hundred dollars in my pocket—I wouldn't mind that; I don't want to be a tramp—to some mining town, or slum, where I could start a general practice; where the things I'd get would be accident cases, condemnation cases; real things, urgent things, that night and day are all alike to me. I'd like to start again and be poor; get this stink of easy money out of my nostrils. I'd like to see if I could make good on my own."

"I came back from New York, after that look at Rose, meaning to do it; meaning to talk it out with Eleanor and tell her why, and then go. Well, I talked. Talked cheap. But I didn't go. I'll never go. I'll go on getting softer and more of a fake; more dependent. And Eleanor will go on eating me up until the last thing in me that's me myself is gone. And then, some day, she'll look at me and see that I'm nothing."

Then, with suddenly thickened speech (an affectation, perhaps), he looked up at Rodney and demanded:

"What are you looking so s-solen about? Can't you take a joke? Come along and have another drink."

"No," Rodney said, "I'm going. And you'd better get to bed."

Rodney walked home that night like a man dazed. The vividness of one blazing idea blinded him. The thing that Randolph had seen and lacked the courage to do; the thing Rodney despised him for a coward for having failed to do—that thing Rose had done.

Without knowing it, yielding to a blind, unscrutinized instinct, he'd wanted Rose to live on his love. He'd tried to smooth things out for her, anticipate her wants. He'd wanted her soft, helpless, dependent. She'd seen, even then, something he'd been blind to—something he'd blinded himself to: that love, by itself, was not enough. That it could poison, as well as feed.

But she had won, among the rest of her spoils of victory, the thing she had originally set out to get. His friendship and respect. Friendship, he remembered her saying, was a thing you had to earn. When you'd earned it, it couldn't be withheld from you. Well, it was right she should be told that; made to understand it to the full. He couldn't ask her to come back to him. But she must know that her respect was as necessary now to him as she'd once said his was to her. He must see her and tell her that.

He stopped abruptly in his walk. His bones, as the Psalmist said, turned to water. How should he confront that gaze of hers, which knew so much and understood so deeply—how with the memory of his two last ignominious encounters with her behind him?

CHAPTER XXIV.

Friends.

Except for the vacuum where the core and heart of it all ought to have been, Rose's life in New York during the year that put her on the highroad to success as a designer of costumes for the theater was a good life, broadening, stimulating, seasonable. It rested, to begin with, on a foundation of adequate material comfort which the unwonted physical privations of the six months that preceded it made seem like positive luxury.

For several months after she came to New York to work for Gairolth she found him a martinet. She never once caught that twinkling gleam of understanding in his eye which had meant so much to her during the rehearsals of "The Girl Up-Stairs." His manner toward her carried out the tone of the letter she'd got from him in Chicago. It was stiff, formal, severe. He seldom praised her work, and never ungrudgingly. His censure was rare, too, to be sure, but this obviously was because Rose almost never gave him an excuse for it. Working for him in this mood gave her the uneasy sensation one experiences when walking abroad under a sultry, overcast sky, with mutterings and flashes in it. And then one night the storm broke.

They had lingered in the theater after the dismissal of a rehearsal, to talk over a change in one of the numbers Rose had been working on. It refused to come out satisfactorily. Rose thought she saw a way of doing it that would work better, and she had been telling him about it. Eagerly, at first, and with a limpid directness which, however, became clouded and troubled, when she felt he wasn't paying attention. It was a difficulty with him she had encountered before.

But tonight, after an angry turn down the aisle and back, he suddenly cried out: "I don't know, I don't, know what you're talking about. I don't know, and I don't care." And then, confronting her, their faces not a foot apart, for by now she had got to her feet, his hands gripped together and shaking, his teeth clenched, his eyes glowing there in the half-light of the auditorium almost like an animal's, he demanded: "Can you see what's the matter with me? Haven't you seen it yet?"

Of course she saw it now, plainly enough. She sat down again, managing an air of deliberation about it, and gripped the back of the orchestra chair in front of her. He remained standing over her there in the aisle.

When the heightening tension of the silence that followed this outburst had grown absolutely unendurable, she spoke. But the only thing she could find to say was almost ludicrously inadequate.

"No, I didn't see it until now. I'm sorry."

"You didn't see it," he echoed. "I know you didn't. You've never seen me at all, from the beginning, as anything but a machine. But why haven't you? You're a woman. If I ever saw a woman in my life, you're one all the way through. Why couldn't you see that I was a man? It isn't because I've got gray hair, nor because I'm fifty years old. I don't believe you're like that. But even back there in Chicago, the night we walked down the avenue from that store—or the night we had supper together after the show . . .

"I suppose I ought to have seen," she said dully. "Ought to have known that that was all there was to it. But I didn't."

"Well, you see it now," he said savagely, and strode away up the aisle and then back to her. He sat down in the seat in front of her and turned around. "I want to see your face," he said. "There's something I've got to know. Something you've got to tell me. You said once, back there in Chicago, that there was only one person who really mattered to you. I want to know who that person is. What he is. Whether he's still the one person who really matters. If he isn't, I'll take my chance."

Remembering the scene afterward, Rose was a little surprised that she'd been able to answer him as she did, without a hesitation or a stammer, and with a straight gaze that held his until she had finished.

"The only person in the world," she said, "who ever has mattered to me, or ever will matter, is my husband. I fell in love with him the day I met him. I was in love with him when I left him. I'm in love with him now. Everything I do that's any good is just something he might be proud of if he knew it. And every failure is just something I hope I would make him understand and not despise me for. It's months since I've seen him, but there isn't a day, there isn't an hour in a day, when I don't think about him and—want him. I don't know whether I'll ever see him again, but if I don't, it won't make any difference with that. That's why I didn't see what I might have seen to you. It wasn't possible for me to see. I'd never have seen it if you hadn't told me in so many words, like this. Do you see now?"

He turned away from her with a nod, and put his hands up to his face. She waited a moment to see whether he had anything else to say, for the habit of waiting for his dismissal was too strong to be broken even for a situation like this. But finding that he hadn't, she got up and walked out of the theater.

There was an hour after she had gained the haven of her apartment when she pretty well went to pieces. So this was all, was it, that she owed her illusory appearance of success to? The amorous selfishness of a man old enough to be her father! Once more, she blissfully and ignorantly unsuspecting all the while, it was love that had made her world go round. The same attraction that James Randolph long ago had told her about. All she'd accomplished in that bitter year since she left Rodney had been to make another man fall in love with her!

It was natural, of course, that the relation between them, after that, should not prove quite so simple and manageable. There were breathless days when the storm visibly hung in the sky; there were strained, stiff, self-conscious moments of rigidly enforced politeness. Things got said despite his resolute repression that had, as resolutely, to be ignored. But in the intervals of these failures there emerged a new thing—genuine friendliness, partnership.

They tell the following as a story that the late J. T. Harahan, former president of the Illinois Central railroad, was fond of telling on himself. Mr. Harahan was sitting in his office one day, while president of the road, when a burly Irishman entered.

"Me name's Casey," he said. "O'want a pass to St. Louis. O'wurruk in 'th' yards."

"That is no way to ask for a pass," said Mr. Harahan. "You should introduce yourself politely. Come back in an hour and try it again."

More good stories have clustered round the sparkling personality of Joseph Choate than almost any other public man of our time. One of the best relates to the time when he had just accepted the post of ambassador to England. An acquaintance, anxious to introduce a friend, came up to him. "Let me introduce you," he said, "to Mr. Joseph H. Choate."

"Wait a moment," said Choate. "Now let me introduce you to England."

OVER 6,400 ACRES FLOODED BY RIVER; SEE DRASTIC STEPS

Meeting of Indian Ford Protective Association Called For This Evening to Consider Plans

Careful surveys of the districts surrounding Lake Koshkonong and those parts of the river above the Indian Ford dam which have been flooded during the recent high water, show that a total of 6,400 acres have been under water; a condition far more serious than most people realize. Hundreds of head of fine milch cattle have had to be sold in the market as clean beef stock, merely because the farmers whose pasture lands had been inundated had no feed for the herds.

One man, P. Pierce, living near Milton Junction, had all but sixty acres out of a 240-acre tract flooded, and was forced to sell off all his stock. This is but one instance of the conditions which exist in the flooded area. One hearing has already been held before the railroad commission relative to the lowering of the crest of the Indian Ford dam, which is the property of the Janesville Electric company, in which the farmers and property owners brought out their evidence of the great damage done by the backed up water. No defense was made by the power company, but a further hearing will be held shortly at Madison, when the case will be considered and if possible a decision reached.

Indications among the farmers point to drastic steps if immediate action is not taken to remedy the conditions which are rapidly making well-to-do farms worthless. A meeting of the Indian Ford Protective association, composed of the farmers affected, has been called for this evening in the J. K. Mack shoe store at Fort Atkinson, and while it is not publicly known just what will be considered at this session, the business is of the utmost importance and the attendance of all members is urged.

In the meantime farmers are bending every effort to do what they can with the flooded land. The water has lowered considerably in the last two weeks, but the inundated areas have been left a mire of swampy mud. The matter was referred to the agricultural experiment station at the state university, and a letter from Assistant Dean D. H. Ous, contains a number of suggestions as to what might be done.

The writer has had a little experience with flooded land. He found that if he could get onto the land with a cultivator, disk or any other implement that would break the crust, that it helped materially in drying off the fields.

I have consulted with our department of agronomy as to what crops may be planted at this time, that may yield some feed for this summer. This department thinks that it will be possible to get sufficient growth of flint corn, or Wisconsin No. 8 corn to help in the silos. The probabilities are, that the corn will be more or less immature, but if sown early in a fairly satisfactory manner, flint corn, Canadian Early, or Longfellow, can be obtained from L. Towell, seed company of Milwaukee, at price $2.50 per bushel. Wisconsin No. 8 corn can be obtained from W. H. Matthee, superintendent of the Florence Iron company farm, Florence, Wis., price $4.00 per bushel.

For hay it is still possible to grow the common Fox Tail Millet. We can be reasonably sure of a crop of millet seeded as late as the 25th of July.

Shortage of silage can be helped by planting turnips. These can be broadcast during the month of July at a rate of 2 to 2½ pounds of seed per acre.

Fall pasture can be had by seeding fall rye. On flooded land this could be seeded as early as the middle to the 20th of August, about the usual time for seeding would be the last week of August. This rye will furnish a large amount of fall and early spring pasture, besides producing a crop of hay. It can be seeded in the corn fields, and in the spring grass seed. Also clover and timothy can be seeded with the rye. For seed get one of the common varieties. Write to the agronomy department, Madison, Wisconsin, for further information on seed.

Some of this land might be seeded to wheat, to be done in September. Our agronomy department recommends, polished No. 2 wheat. I would suggest writing early for quotations.

The above is offered merely as suggestions. Doubtless there are a number of individual problems that will confront the farmers in the flooded district. Your business food agent will be glad to do all that he can to help out in this emergency. If I can be of any service whatever, communicate with me at Fort Atkinson.
